Why prioritize owned channels?

They’re the primary information source
You have full control
Low to no cost
High volume of visits/interactions
Relationship-building opportunities
Make your website shine

- Implement navigation that’s intuitive and easy to use
- Communicate what your organization does and how students can benefit
  - Share your key messages
- Ensure that the content is accurate, up-to-date, and reflective of present day.
  - Does it appear to be from this decade?
- Aim to inspire a feeling on your homepage
- Utilize photography to tell a story
- Ensure that the site is responsive across devices
- Identify the most sought after information and make it easy to find
  - How many clicks does it take?
- Follow the university’s brand standards
- Make sure your content is accessible

Win the inbox

- Segment your audience to the extent possible
- Consider the entire inbox experience
  - Are you sending at an optimal time?
  - Who is the email coming ‘from’? What’s the sender’s email address?
  - Is there an engaging subject line?
  - Make sure your email content can be easily viewed/consumed on mobile devices
  - Test all of the above factors
  - Coordinate with your department/division to avoid redundancy and tune-out
- Utilize branded templates
- Don’t try to achieve too much with one email
  - Try to maintain a singular objective and call-to-action
- Make sure that call-to-action is clear and prominent
  - Test color, copy, placement, shape
